Denver, CO – OBS, Inc., a Colorado based automotive security and electronics company, continues to experience industry recognition through national car and truck magazines since the release of their InSight Audio Video Security System.

OBS has been published in numerous car and truck magazines for 2005 that highlight the InSight product including the April 2005 edition of Car Audio and Electronics Magazine. Other magazines that recently featured the InSight Audio Video Security System include the February 2005 Truckin Magazine, March 2005 Super Rod Magazine, and Spring 2004 Ford Focus Magazine. "It's exciting to see the automotive and truck industries embrace our technology and innovation," said Brian Singer, President and CEO of OBS, Inc. "This demonstrates there is a real interest and demand for our InSight product."

InSight Audio Video Security System is the only device which integrates with a vehicle to monitor activities 24/7 capturing both pre-event and post-event audio and video. Combining 4 hidden cameras, 2 microphones and SD cards, the InSight system offers the ultimate in vehicle security and protection through a high quality stand alone system. The InSight's compact form factor allows for discrete and easy installation as well as easy integration with current vehicle systems. In addition to collisions, this device can record damage and theft of property that may have gone unnoticed with a conventional alarm security system.

OBS has increased production in 2005 to meet its growing demand and increased sales. Distribution was recently extended to Great Britain, and OBS is looking to enter new markets towards the end of 2005.
